Little by little the story of how the heroism play had been staged was wormed out of the unwilling Jauch. He told the detectives that the fuse had not even been lighted in the basement of the building. He had prepared the properties for his little drama in his room Monday and had burned the end of the fuse to give it the appearance of having been started and had laid the burned match beside it to make the properties more convincing.

Assistant Secretary Galloway was acting in his stead, but his office is across the half from that occupied by the Secretary. At the same time the police were satisfied that with the plant which Jauch had set, in the event of a real explosion, there was ample dynamite in the package to have done serious damage to life and property. Two pounds of the compound which Jauch had used in his pseudo-psycho-heroic effort to gain notoriety and approval, were sufficient in their opinion to have blown a hole in the old building sufficient to drive a locomotive through.

The opinion says, in part:

"In the Washington case we observed that the store-door service at both Baitimore and Washington presented features which in the absence of further explanation appeared to be grossly discriminatory. The present record leaves mode only within restricted limits in each city, and was never accorded to any other city by the respondent carriers, nor to freight from points other than those in the restricted territory hereinbefore referred to.

Discrimination Against District Prevented by Commission's Declaration.

In important freight rate de directly affecting Baltimore and Washington the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday decided:

1. That store-door delivery of certain classes of freight by the railroads should not be restored because it constituted a discrimination in favor of Baltimore and Washington and against competitive. Washington and against compecities where store-door deliveries cities where store-door deliveries never were made by the railroads; that while the elimination of this service was tantamount to an increase in the freight rate, the increase eliminated a dis-criminatory "hump" in the established freight tariffs.

2. That the railroads are not justified in charging the same rates on certain lasses of freight between Richmond and New York as between Washington and New York, because the haul between Richmond and New York is 116 miles onger,
3. That through-freight rates between

Washington and the Carolinas should be no greater than the aggregate of rates for intermediate points.

Victories for Capital. The decisions handed down yesterday represent substantial victories for Washington in the last two listed instances. The Southern recently filed new tariffs with the commission and the two freight rate cases were held up pending action
